ALL ABOUT MY MOTHER 1999

Motherhood is a recurring theme in the films of Pedro Almodóvar. The mothers in his movies are fierce, passionate, and resourceful – often in varying combinations, and to varying extremes.

All About My Mother is far more spellbinding than his earlier films in its drama and none shows the figure of the mother as lovingly as this one. It is his masterpiece of maternal desire and loss, a film of extraordinary love and friendship. It was made in the last months of the life of Almodóvar's own mother.

The film also explores – with tender sensitivity – the trials and tribulations of LGBTQ+ life.

A surprisingly satisfying combination of bawdy sexual humour, genuine emotion and a plot with mechanics so excessive that Almodóvar himself calls it 'a screwball drama.' All in all, it is full-blown, tender, feminine, magical, sublime even – arguably the most exquisitely moving film that Almodóvar ever made. Winner of the Oscar, the BAFTA and the Golden Globe for best Foreign Language Film 1999.
